This book holds the rules that keep BrandingOS recognisable in every place it appears — what must stay fixed, and what is free to move.

One Core. Infinite Formations.

WHAT WE ARE

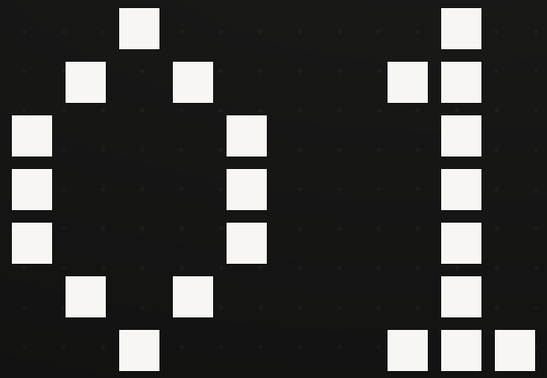

An operating system for brands. One place where strategy, identity, voice and assets stay connected.

WHAT WE BELIEVE

A brand is not a logo. It is a system of decisions — and systems are what let creativity scale.

HOW WE LOOK

Black, white and grey. Structure outside, freedom inside. The only colour on screen belongs to our customers.

Logo

Nine nodes. One core. The mark is the system at rest.

LOGOMARK

Nine nodes — eight modules held in orbit around a single core.

LOGOTYPE

Custom-drawn in the spirit of Funnel Display. “OS” sits at the same weight; it is part of the name, not a suffix.

USE

The horizontal lockup is the default. Use it wherever it fits before reaching for a variant.

Built from one unit.

Every measurement comes from x, the diameter of a single node. The core sits at the exact centre; the eight modules sit on one ring around it, grouped in pairs.

Colour

We have no colour on purpose. Neutrality is a position.

Function over name.

BrandingOS is black, white and grey. Colour belongs to the brands that live inside it — an operating system with its own colour would compete with every brand it holds.

The only colour on the screen should be yours.

Core Black

Structure. Type, marks, dark grounds.

HEX #0B0B0B
RGB 11 11 11
CMYK 0 0 0 96

Warm White

Space. The default page.

HEX #F7F6F3
RGB 247 246 243
CMYK 0 0 2 3

Pure White

Activation. Cards, fields, focus.

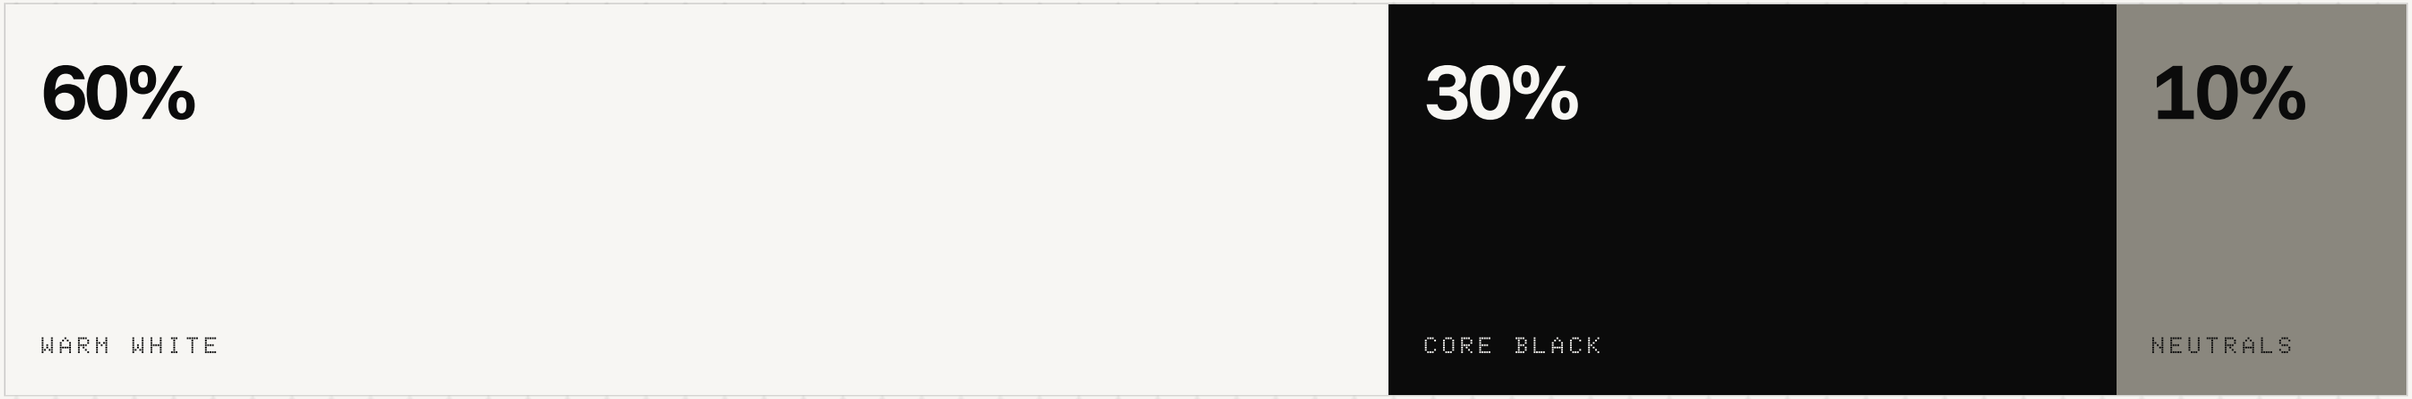

HEX #FFFFFF
RGB 255 255 255

Six greys.
No hue, ever.

The neutral scale is warm by a few degrees, so the page reads as paper rather than screen. Each step has a job — pick by function, not by taste.

DO

Set headlines in sentence case, tight, and end them with a full stop. They are statements.

DO

Use grey on the second line to show hierarchy inside one thought.

DON'T

Mix more than two weights on a page, or set body text in Doto.

Graphic System

Grid, dot, formation and matter.

A system needs structure.

Everything sits on a 12-column grid. Typography obeys it; expression is allowed to challenge it. Structure is what makes deviation legible.

A dot always means something.

A dot marks a node, a state, a selection or a signal. Never use dots simply to make something feel branded.

MEANINGFUL

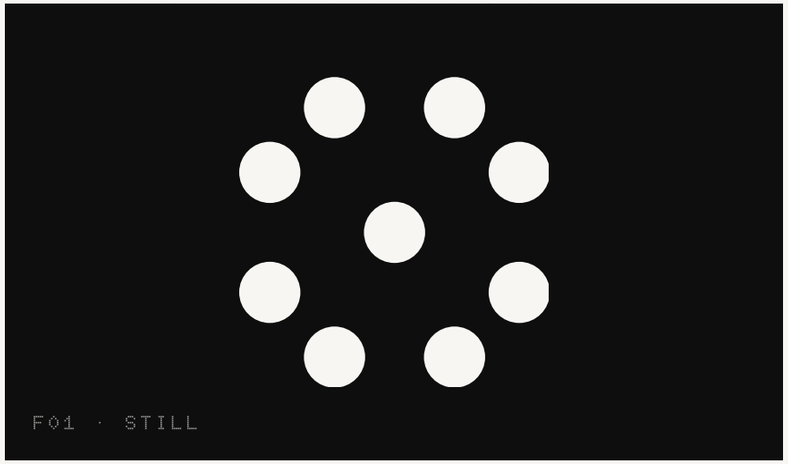

- Active workspace
- Draft, not published

DECORATIVE

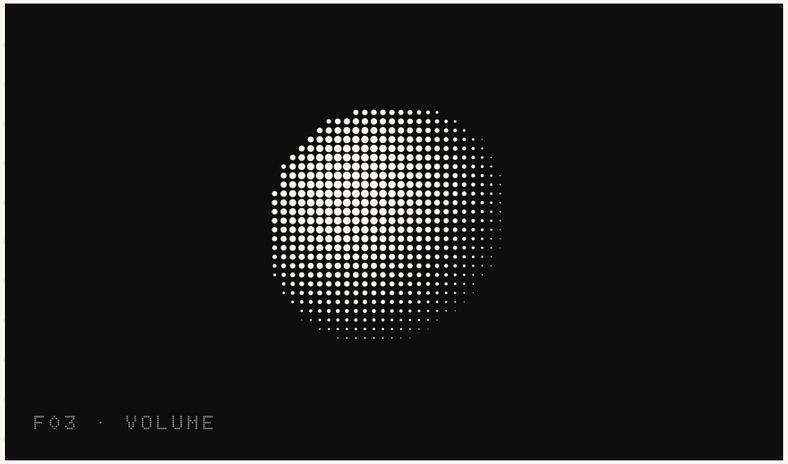

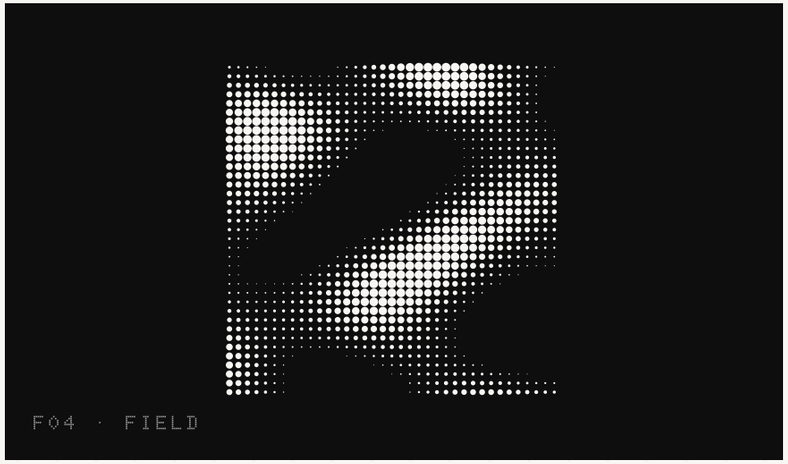

Pattern with nothing to say.

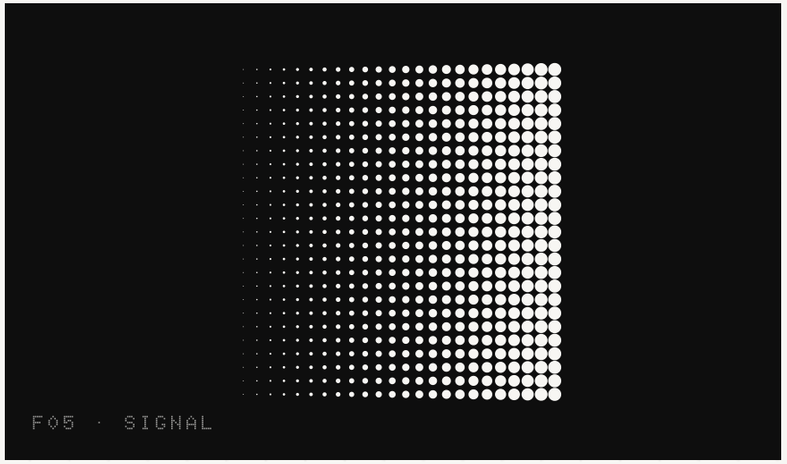

Form is temporary. Logic is permanent.

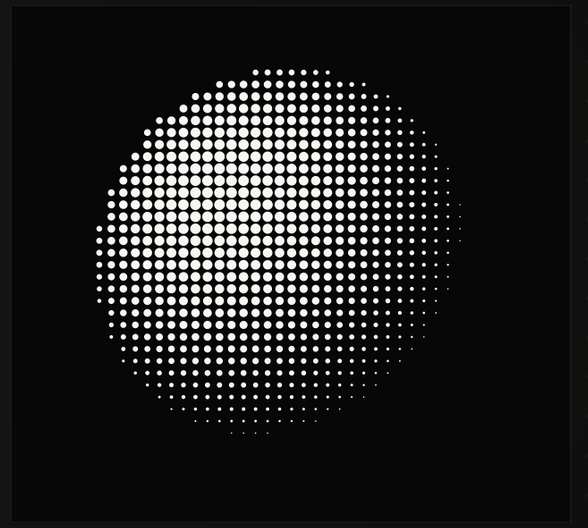

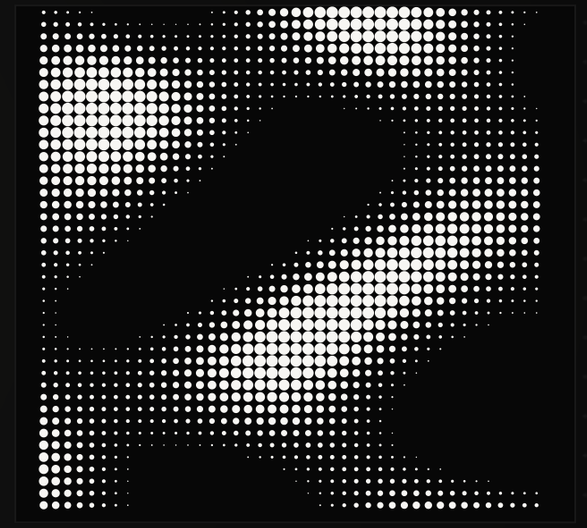

Brand matter.

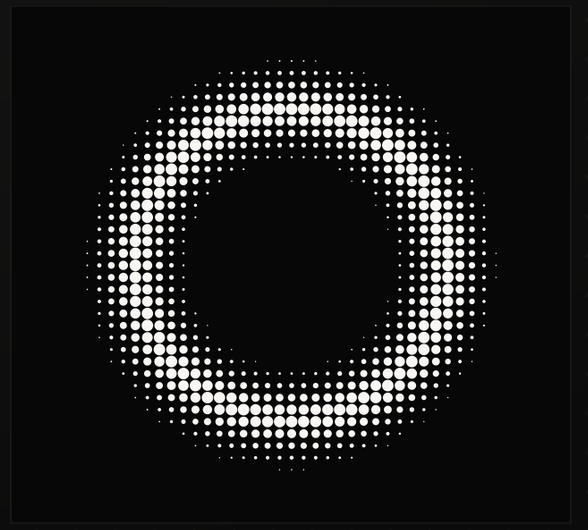

Images are monochrome, grained and halftoned — matter, not stock. They show material, depth and movement, never people pretending to work.

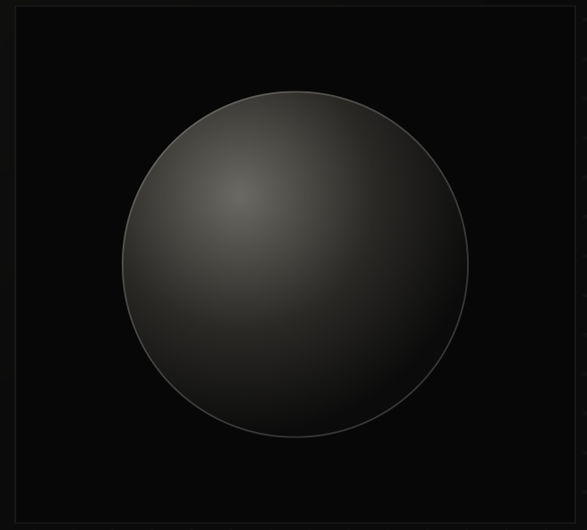

Use halftone, grain, macro texture, soft volume, deep blacks.

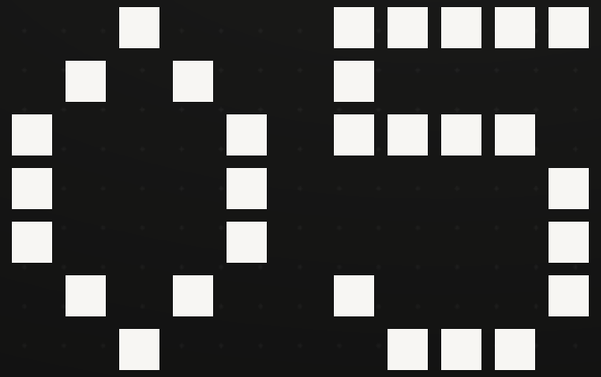

Avoid colour photography, stock scenes, gradients with hue, glossy 3D.

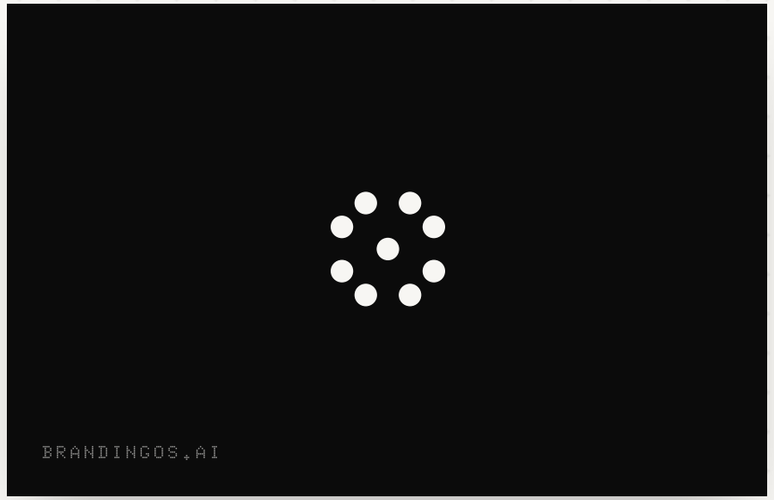

Applications

Product, print, social, web. The proof.

The mark is also the product's loader: the ring fades in sequence while the core holds. At rest it turns slowly — it is never replaced by a generic spinner.

Voice

Calm, clear, structural. We sound like the system we build.

01 Clarity over noise.

Say the thing. One idea per sentence.

02 Systems enable creativity.

Rules are how freedom scales, not what limits it.

03 Consistency without repetition.

Same core, new words. Never a template voice.

04 Evolution without dilution.

Change the form. Keep the meaning.

05 Human judgment at the Core.

AI assists. People decide. We say so.
